

Adult Program gets practical and creative

Another piece of the Adult Day Program is in place and serving clients: The Work Skills Room is up and running (photo, left). Complete with office supplies and other tools, clients sharpen office skills (shredding, filing, colating), assemble products, and practice time management. The room is also space to work on projects received from future community partners.

The program welcomes art teacher Karen Spieker, who divides her time between the school program and the adult program. Staff and clients look forward to tapping into her creative expertise and expanding their self expression through art (photo, right). Clients have already delved into the world of the art masters by studying the work of an Artist of the Month. In October, clients explored the work of Pablo Picasso. This month, clients experience the work of Wassily Kandinsky. ♦

Kingsway's littlest merchants

Students in Chelsea Jennings' class took part in an academic play center put together by Betsy Allemand and Danielle Gehin-Scott's upper elementary classes. They raked leaves, filled up kettle corn bags and used the cash register to help their peers pay. They also worked on bigger/smaller and heavier/lighter activities with a scale. It may have been a pretend business, but they worked hard and did a great job! ♦

JOB SITE OF THE MONTH Shop Rite, Cherry Hill

Anyone who's gone grocery shopping knows that store shelves can get mixed up. The Community Based Instruction (CBI) students at this job site keep the aisles straight, stocked and looking sharp.

Three days a week, students Nicole, Laura and Madison are accompanied by Job Coach Cheryl Lingard to the Cherry Hill Shop Rite. On this day, Laura and Nicole are straightening shelves, filling empty spots and removing products that don't belong in an aisle.

"It's a nice store. I like working here," says Laura, as Nicole smiles and nods in agreement.

"One of my favorite things about being a job coach is to see how excited the students are when they're at work," says Ms. Lingard. "Learning what they like to do makes a difference in how well they perform their tasks. I love to see them use the guide that was created for them to identify where in the store misplaced items go, and helping customers locate items based on the guide."

Meanwhile, Madison is in the bakery area working with two Shop Rite employees. She restocks the freshly made bagels, prepares cookies for baking, packs cookies into containers, and affixes the labels. "She does an excellent job," says Ms. Lingard, "and she loves it." ♦

Halloween Finale: The Parade!

Voorhees FD visits for Fire Safety Week

*During a recent visit, members of the Voorhees Fire Department showed off rescue equipment, demonstrated firefighting gear and talked about how firefighters should never be feared--they are there to help.
